

Association for
Palliative Medicine

Article of the Month

February 2018

The Royal College of Physicians

This month, the Royal College of Physicians is focusing on end-of-life care in both of its journals and in its membership magazine. Clinical Medicine includes reviews of how to manage cancer pain and non-pain symptoms (co-authored by Jason Boland, chair of the APM Science Committee), plus guidance on less directly clinical aspects of caring for the dying patient, ranging from legal issues to religion.

The Future Healthcare Journal, meanwhile, focuses on the system changes needed to deliver high-quality care at the end of life, plus research and discussions around attitudes to assisted dying, while Commentary Magazine brings a wide variety of perspectives by key thinkers and innovators in the field, as well as family members and carers.
